

Monash University
FIT5046 Research Paper Presentation -Marking Guide

Student ID

	Criteria	Not satisfactory	Poor	Average	Good	Very Good	Excellent
Group assessment	How well the group members have coordinated the overall presentation and task allocation, with equal participation and contribution , and (time) balance between group members 10%
	How well the discussions and presentation contents are structured and recorded 10%
	How well the presentation contents are summarised by focusing on key points , following 6X6 rules as much as possible 10%
	How well the timing is done (about 5 minutes for each group member with the total of 10 minutes) 10%
	References correctly done in the APA style (10%)
Individual assessment	How well the one paper is selected for Background (seminal ¹ paper) (10%)
	Well-prepared without any pauses and doubts, providing clear explanations of topics (10%)
	The talk is audible (loud enough) and uses the right intonation (10%)
	Showing deep understanding of the topic, in-depth analysis and critical thinking for the selected two slides (10%)
	How well the question is answered (10%)
	Total
	Overall Comments:

¹ A seminal paper in a research field is a paper that introduces an important innovation and a great idea and is highly cited by other researcher. You can check its citations in Google scholar and it could be >40-100.

